

Journal of Biological Macromolecules
Instructions to authors

1. Aims and scope: Journal of Biological Macromolecules (JBM) is the journal of Japan Science Society of Biological Macromolecules (JSB). It publishes the results of biological macromolecules-related research in the fields of Bioscience and Biotechnology. The main research targets are 1) Enzymes that catalyze reactions such as synthesis, degradation, and transfer, 2) Biological membrane equipment and cell activity (biological response, cell fusion and introduction of macromolecules, and signal reception), 3) Materials mainly consisting of biological macromolecules (food or pharmaceutical materials and DNA chip), 4) Generation and regulation of functional enzyme or protein, 5) Living environment, 6) Generation of biological tool (vector, vesicle) and novel living organism, 7) New planning of biological industry, and 8) Others.
2. Edit: JBM Editorial Office are responsible for edit and publication. For each manuscript, one editor is assigned. The editor is in charge of reviewing process.
3. Publication: JBM is published at least twice a year in general. Manuscripts are received at any time.
4. Copyright: The copyrights of the published articles attribute to JSB.
5. Manuscript type: JBM deals with Review, Article, Report, Letter to Editor, and Corporate Introduction. Articles that contain original and novel findings are accepted. When accepted, manuscripts are directly printed.
